All of this blood cost me nothing because I was fortunate enough to live in a free blood county due to the American Red Cross Blood Program and to the many donors to this blood program.

Teach-in, Speech, Exhibits Conclude Earth Week

By Barry Eysman and John Ethridge

"Earth Week" was concluded Friday after several days of activity on campus.

THE WEDNESDAY night Teach-in involved faculty members and students in two hours of discussion on the environment.

Moderated by Dr. Stanley Williams of the Social Science Department, the panel included Dr. Ted James, Biology; Dr. Kenneth Bordeaux, Geology; Dr. Bobby N. Duck, Agriculture; Mr. Robert Gilbert, Social Sciences; Mr. John Fletcher, Business Administration.

DURING THE Teach-in, various problems and solutions were questioned and discussed. Points questioned and discussed included: Population control, agricultural output; response by business; quality of life in the future; waste disposal and re-use; family structure; sources of power; and the greenhouse effect.

The speakers indicated that changes in the future style of life are unavoidable, and the major questions now are what kind of changes will occur, how will they be brought about, and what affect will they have on life as we know it.

THURSDAY night, Fred W. Stanberry, the director of the Tennessee Game and Fish Commission, spoke on "Environment and Wildlife."

Part of his talk was devoted to wild life problems (mainly fish).

MR. STANBERRY said it takes about ten pounds of fish food organisms to make up one pound of fish, and it takes 70 pounds of food to support these fish food organisms. If the food for the organisms is polluted, the fish are destroyed.

Mr. Stanberry said the lack of wildlife around the Obion River was caused by the clearing of wooded areas along the river during dredging by the U.S. Corps of Engineers.

WHEN ASKED what interested and concerned people could do about stream pollution in Tennessee, Mr. Stanberry suggested that people write to their respective state legislators asking that more money be appropriated to the stream pollution control board. He also gave a brief summary of the state game laws and penalties involving their violation.

Several other activities were held during the week. Tables were set up in the University Center with petitions and anti-pollution information available. About 750 signatures were obtained.

Petitions are available in the SG office and must be in by 5 Monday on May 11.

ALONG with these requirements, election commissioner Becky Waller asks that prospective candidates familiarize themselves with the senator's duties as stated in Article III of the Constitution.

"THE SENATE shall meet in regular sessions once each month. A majority of the senate membership shall constitute a quorum. A complete record of the senate proceedings shall be kept and shall be open to the public at all times.

"A majority of the senators present must approve a bill before it shall become a law.

"THE Senate shall have the power to bring impeachment proceedings against any elected or appointed officer for gross negligence of duty or any act that would bring discredit to the Student Government of the University of (See page 6, col. 2)

Rodeo Competition Slated Friday

Bronc riding, bulldogging, and goat tying will be among the events during the second annual UTM College Rodeo Friday and Saturday at 8 p. m. at the Union City Fairgrounds.

FEATURED EVENTS in the program will be bronc and bull riding, bulldogging, barrel racing for both men and women, cattle roping, wild cow milking, and goat tying.

The rodeo team here was envisioned a little over a year ago. Today, after work through the College of Agriculture as well as local individuals and civic groups, team enrollment is over 50 active members, both men and women.

COMMENTARY

Rusty Farrell
Junior, Sec. Ed.

Strong-arming Must Be Stopped

Another UTM student was beaten Friday night. An ex-athlete egged on by two friends allegedly assaulted the student — from what was said before the alleged attack, it appeared that the student was thought to be a "hippie" or, at least to have been a close friend of some "hippies."

THIS IS the third or fourth "hippie beating" since last summer. Other victims included a long-haired student poet attacked on campus, and two faculty members accosted in a local bar. Unfortunately, the "law and order" people in both the campus and the town have passed these things off. It seems that boys just shouldn't have long hair and teachers shouldn't drink beer in public.

These beatings are now taking on serious implications, and several things can happen. Righteous conservatives and local red-necks can keep beating up long-hairs. The "hippies" and other innocent victims will soon give up on some of the unsympathetic campus establishment and head straight for court. This should make things at least a little messy for "do gooding" Americans who feel like beating on people.

OF COURSE violence and ensuing court action will reflect on UTM unfavorably. And the peaceful "liberal left" could transform into a "militant left" intent on defending themselves. Maybe a "shotgun shootout" will occur as it did two years ago.

The answer is some quick action on the part of someone. Violence in any form, has to be stopped cold before it escalates throughout the campus community. Strongarming and hoodlumism have no place among men of knowledge and reason regardless of differing life styles.

If a campus starts using its fists instead of its heads the worst is just around the corner.

Critics Corner and the Commentary column are open to students and faculty for expression of opinions. In order to be considered for publication, the material must be turned in by 10 a.m. Monday.

FINE ARTS

By Aaron
Tatum

After the workmen left the other day, I slipped over to the new Fine Arts Building and sneaked inside for a look at what to expect. This building beats most of the theatres I saw in New York a few weeks ago. Very impressive.

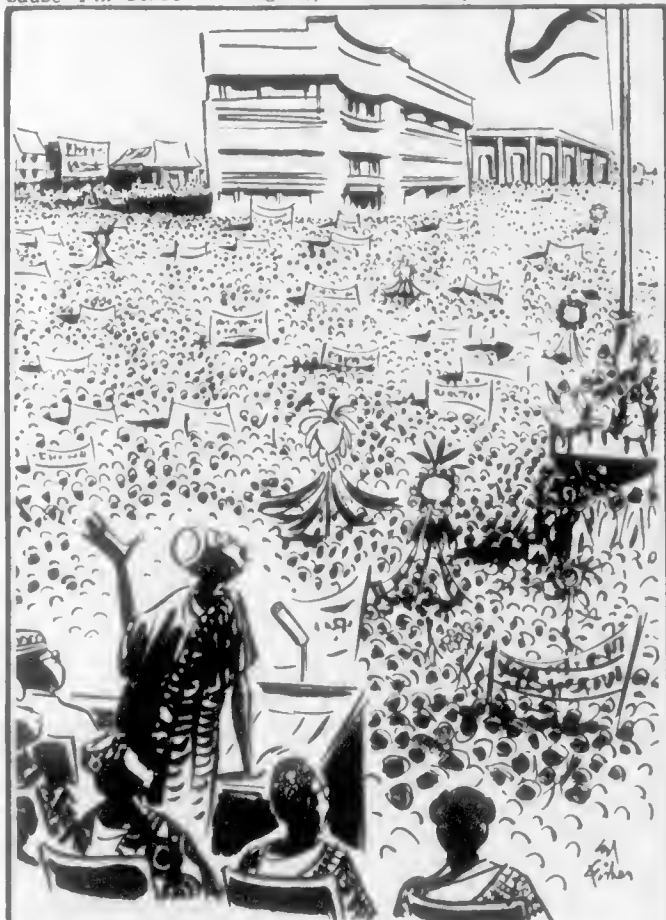

THE STAGE is spacious. I'd say about 50 to 60 feet wide and 45 feet back or so. A stage floor will be nailed down soon. A play's scenes can be changed frequently due to a very high ceiling above the stage which will enable the men to drop props from the catwalk far and directly above the stage. (I climbed up on the catwalks out of mischievousness and wished I hadn't have gone because I'm scared of heights.)

For a theatre this place is immense.

A backstage garage door allows the stagehands to bring in large vehicles or whatever is necessary to make the play more authentic. Directly in front of the stage and below is the musician's pit. It will capacitiate a full orchestra which will be placed on hydraulic lifts—like an open elevator rising up and down in the large pit.

THE VIEWER has a choice to see his performance on the main floor of seats or in the mezzanine which can give him a down-angle view (great for ballet and dance).

The lighting system looked (See page 3, col. 1)

Dear Editors:

We would like to commend you on last week's Volette. It was an excellent paper, one of the best so far this year.

We especially enjoyed the article by Barry Eysman on the Railroad Stations. It brought out things that many of us think about but we can never find an appropriate way of expressing them.

Again, congratulations on an excellent paper.

Seven members of Student Government attended the Southern Universities Student Government Association meeting (SUSGA) in Memphis Thursday through Saturday.

REPRESENTATIVES included President Billy Cunningham, President-Elect Steve Becker, Secretary of Finance Nell Moody, Coordinator of SUSGA Wendell Wainwright, Secretary-Elect of Affairs Bonnie Meador, Vice - President - Elect Becky Waller, the new Secretary of Communications Arthur Moss, and Secretary-Elect of Finance Mary Baird.

SG sponsors Dr. Phillip Watkins and Russell Duncan were also present.

SUSGA IS a non-political organization for universities and colleges to provide service and information.

The convention was three days of meeting and discussion. Wainwright, upon the recommendation of former SUSGA President Tom Marshall, led a discussion group in the field of black affairs. Schools in seven states were represented.

OTHER discussion centered around the recommendations of schools for the selection of entertainment for each college to sponsor. UTM will be bringing back the Town Criers.

The most important aspect of the convention was the general (See page 3, col. 1).

'THE THING THAT IRKS ME ABOUT THE SCHOOL SYSTEMS IS THEIR LACK OF PLANNING!'

★★★ My View ★★★

by Barry Eysman

Tell me what its like to hunt. Explain the virtues of killing animals to me.

IS IT some special kind of feeling when you put your gun butt to your shoulder and fire? Is there a pounding of your blood, a racing of your heart? Is the feeling akin to being master of all the world. Speak to me of the sweet smell of gunpowder and how it makes you feel all tingly and warm inside when you've bagged your target.

Which is the best game to hunt? Are birds better than deer as far as self-esteem is concerned? Would you rather kill something to eat or something to stuff and hang on your wall? What kind of game would a beginning hunter stalk?

WOULD IT be some animal that is young and lithe or some animal tired and lame? Would it be male or female? Would it walk on the ground and run from you or would it fly through the morning sky? Tell me the strategy of the hunter.

And the rifle. That marvelous mechanism whose sole purpose is to kill. Tell me how to load it and clean it so it will never get rusty and blow up in my face. Tell me how to load it and fire. After all, how can anyone be a man unless he has had some successful kills?

IN ENGLAND all the rich people have fox hunts. That must be exciting—seeing a pack of dogs chasing a fox and tearing it to bone and cartilage. But here we don't have fox hunts. So how do we make up for it. I guess those licenses the game wardens give out make up for the lack of a fox hunt. Jolly good.

What is the moment of the kill—the special time when you are on top of the world? Is it when the creature is shot? Is it when the bullet is fired? Is it when the dog retrieves your prey? When is that moment that makes you feel like a man? Is it the waiting that's the best? Sitting in a duck blind waiting for the kill? Is that it?

SIPPING on strong coffee in a dew filled morning with the wind at just the right velocity and that extraordinary feeling in your bones? That must be it. The waiting is best.

How do I become a hunter? How do I join the illustrious ranks of the men with the firesticks? Must I bag an animal on my own first? How about a deer? They make pretty decorations. Maybe a buck? But now a fawn, after all there is such a thing as a code of ethics. Killing a doe or fawn—that would be unheard of. But a buck? Yes, that's the style. Boy, everyone would look up to me then.

BUT BEFORE I load my gun, tell me one thing. Do you see the bullet enter the animal? Is that part of the "sport?" And does the animal—say that prize buck—scream with his animal voice? I don't know. They may not, I'm just asking.

Hunting is a very profitable enterprise, you know. You could make a living at it in — say — Alaska. They kill seals there by bashing their heads in, or maybe shooting them, or any other method they like. It pays good money. Or we could kill other animals for fun and profit. After all, women must have their animal skin coats. And wasn't that what these dumb creatures were put here for anyway?

ONE OTHER thing about hunting—the putting of the deer on the side of your car. That must be a good feeling—tying that dead body onto wherever on the car you tie it. And then going down the highway and everybody knowing you're the greatest hunter who ever lived. And then lugging the huge beast into the house and waiting for your wife's "ooh's" and "ah's". That must be the best moment of all.

But I had better learn to be a hunter fast. Because they say "game" is decreasing. They, whoever they are, have the gall to tell us we are making some creatures extinct. (See page 6, col. 3) quite intricate and professional and I'm sure it will give us some great effects. Look forward to seeing many good plays, concerts, and recitals here instead of our old shack at the other end of the campus.

THE STUDENT of art, music, or drama now has the best of classrooms on the second floor and the forward part of the first floor. These rooms have plenty of space and the best of facilities whether it be acoustics or shelves for artwork.

The entrance to this building strikes me with its compactness and the certain majesty in its columns and balconies above the stairs. It's a very practical room with room for people during intermission.

IT REMINDED me of the foyer in Lincoln Center's Vivian Beaumont Theatre in New York (in miniature). This building even has showers and bathrooms with see through windows.

Everyone should look forward to the opening of the new Fine Arts Building and all should see it when it does open. Let us look forward to the work in the Fine Arts which shall shine from this building and especially the students.

Boling Announces Members Of Counseling Groups

Dr. Edward J. Boling, president-elect of The University of Tennessee, announced the names of the student and faculty members who will serve on his newly created counseling groups last week.

DR. BOLING'S initial meetings with the two groups were scheduled Monday for the student counselors and yesterday for the faculty advisors.

The student counselors are Billy Cunningham, president of the Student Government Association, Francine Giles, and Bill Rosson for UTM.

FACULTY counselors are Charles Cailis, assistant professor of physics; Dr. Charles Mangam, chairman of Department of English; and Dr. Nells Robinson, associate professor of animal sciences for UTM.

Dr. Boling discussed the proposals that he recently made to the U-T Board of Trustees on establishing system-level organizations to attack rural and urban problems facing Tennessee.

HE PROPOSED that the Agricultural Extension Service and the Agricultural Experiment Station be made part of the statewide system, serving the state's rural areas, and that the organizations and faculty members of all campuses now serving urban communities study ways to expand their efforts in a system-wide approach to solving environmental problems in the urban areas.

Dr. Boling said he would request the assistance of these two groups to the greatest possible extent including matters in which the president has the sole responsibility of making recommendations to the Board of Trustees.

"IN REACHING decisions on such matters, I shall give full consideration to the opinions of these counselors and I shall take advantage of their advice, but it should be kept in mind that the final recommendations of the system administration must and will be made by the president," Dr. Boling said.

Dr. Boling will also talk with both groups about his successor as vice president for development and administration.

THE STUDENT Government and SUSGA's Executive Council voted for it previously, but the final outcome will determine by a vote by mail of all southern colleges and universities.

Wainwright planned to endorse a new division to SUSGA called the Human Relations Division. Its purpose would be to inform each delegate of SUSGA about human relations of today's society and to obtain enough information to improve his school situations.

HE WAS unable to mention it, however, due to the congressional deadlock.

Next year SUSGA will convene in Atlanta. Wainwright has called a meeting with Dr. Watkins and the new SG officers the day they take office to talk about future interests between universities and SUSGA.

Student Recitals Prove Successful

by Aaron Tatum

Thursday night proved a success for two seniors who utilized this recital as a partial fulfillment of the requirements for the B.S. in Music Education. But for both of these performers it was more than fulfilling a requirement.

A capable flutist, Dola Acree captivated the audience with Sonata I by Bach. She handled her instrument quite efficiently accompanied by Robert Stewart.

Judy Hansford, Mezzo-Soprano, displayed her progress with a very good performance of what had to be some very hard, choice material.

HER 5 Green Folksongs were handled real well as was her 5 Chinese Love Poems. These last five were the best with their abrupt change of moods and very short simple lines. Joyce Crane, the accompanist did a good job.

Throughout this recital I noticed constantly a bug or two flying near the performers. It was distracting. I thought if only we were in the new Fine Arts Building now with its great acoustics and central heating and cooling. The performers could perform at ease instead of a strain. This time is just around the corner. (See Column.)

AUDIENCES will get bigger when the new Fine Arts Building is ready, but despite the relatively bad conditions many seats could stand to be filled. A student recital is also scheduled tomorrow. Try to make it.

Hard work has gone into the recitals--long hours of practice. See if you can come and enjoy the sterling performances.

Puckett To Perform

GARY Puckett and the Union Gap will perform in concert May 13th at 8 p.m. in the Fieldhouse. Tickets will be sold at the University Center Information desk—$3.00 advance and $4.00 at the door.

YAF Chairman Speaks

Mr. Allen Strawbridge, Jr., of Dresden, West Tennessee Vice - chairman of Young Americans For Freedom, will speak to the YAF tonight at 7 P.M. in a University Center conference room.

In addition to Mr. Strawbridge, YAF will also feature "Tyranny," a 30 minute film about the atrocities of Communism.

My View

Isn't that ridiculous. We haven't done that. We always leave the baby animals alive so they can grow up and be shot when they are adult.

WHO CARES that the passenger pigeons, bison, California grizzly bears, or California parakeet are gone? Big deal. We've got more animals to shoot. We have more animals upon which to prove we are "men." We have the killer instinct, and we are going to use it.

We have to be careful. Quite a lot of propaganda is being put out about the so-called "extinction" of some animals. Why, get this paragraph from Dr. Paul R. Ehrlich's "The Population Bomb".

"I'VE COME to the conclusion that it (conservation) is being lost for two powerful reasons," writes Ehrlich. Of course, the first reason is the population explosion. But then we get down to the second reason—which is pure propaganda.

"The second (reason)," he says, "is that most Americans clearly don't give a damn. They've never heard of the American Condor and would shed no tears if it became extinct. Indeed, many Americans would compete for the privilege of shooting the last one."

ISN'T THAT the most ridiculous statement you've read? Hunters are "sportsmen." They know how to kill "game" without destroying the "game" itself. They are with it when it comes to "balance of nature" and all that jazz. Sure they are. Aren't they?
